10.6 Attitudes to Money and the Exploitation of the Poor: 30-minute Pack

AQA 8062 · about 30 minutes

Total Marks

Name: _____ Date: ____ / ____ / _____

Answer ALL questions.

1 Explain two contrasting views about whether wealth is a blessing or a danger.

(Total for Question 1 is 5 marks)

© Revision Library | revisionlibrary.co.uk

2 This question is about attitudes to money and the exploitation of the poor. It is the AQA-style 24-mark, five-part question.

(a) State what is meant by riba. (1)

(b) Give two ways a lender might exploit a poor borrower. (2)

(c) Explain two religious teachings about the exploitation of the poor. Refer to a sacred text in your answer. (4)

(d) Explain two contrasting views about whether charging interest on a loan is always wrong. Refer to a religious and a non-religious view in your answer. (5)

(e) Evaluate this statement: 'Charging interest on a loan is always a form of exploitation.' In your answer you should: refer to religious teaching, refer to different points of view, reach a justified conclusion. (12)

© Revision Library | revisionlibrary.co.uk

(Total for Question 2 is 24 marks)

© Revision Library | revisionlibrary.co.uk

Mark scheme · 10.6 Attitudes to Money and the Exploitation of the Poor: 30-minute Pack

Question 1

view 1: wealth itself is morally neutral, or even a blessing, when used well, oe B1

development: this view notes that wealth makes generosity possible, e.g. paying Zakah requires having savings, and that wealthy, respected figures appear positively in both Christian and Muslim tradition, so wealth is not wrong in itself, oe B1

view 2: wealth carries real spiritual danger, oe B1

development: this view points to teachings such as Mark 10:25, 'It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than for someone who is rich to enter the kingdom of God', warning that wealth can lead to pride, greed or a false sense of security that distracts a person from God and from caring for others, oe B1

reference to a specific teaching made accurately, oe B1

Answer: Contrast: wealth as morally neutral or a blessing when used well vs wealth as carrying real spiritual danger (e.g. Mark 10:25).

Question 2

(a) the Arabic term for interest or usury, which is forbidden in Islamic teaching, oe B1

(a) Answer: The Arabic term for interest or usury, which is forbidden in Islamic teaching.

(b) charging extremely high ('extortionate') interest rates, oe B1

(b) lending to people who clearly cannot afford to repay, trapping them in a cycle of debt, oe (accept using aggressive or threatening methods to collect debts) B1

(b) Answer: E.g. charging extortionate interest rates; lending to people who clearly cannot afford to repay, trapping them in a cycle of debt.

(c) point 1: the Bible condemns those who unfairly withhold wages from workers, oe B1

(c) development: James 5:4 warns, 'Look! The wages you failed to pay the workers who mowed your fields are crying out against you', showing that exploiting workers for financial gain is condemned, oe B1

(c) point 2: the Qur'an forbids interest (riba) as an unjust way of profiting from someone's need, oe B1

(c) development: Qur'an 2:275 teaches, 'Allah has permitted trade and has forbidden interest', reflecting the belief that interest-based lending is inherently unjust to the borrower, oe B1

(c) Answer: E.g. Bible teaching condemning withholding fair wages from workers (James 5:4); Qur'an teaching forbidding interest as unjust (Qur'an 2:275).

(d) view 1: all interest is wrong, oe B1

(d) development: Islamic teaching prohibits riba outright, since it guarantees the lender a profit without sharing any of the risk, and in practice interest can trap the poorest borrowers in unpayable debt, which is why Islamic finance instead uses profit-sharing or leasing arrangements, oe B1

(d) view 2: not all interest is exploitative, oe B1

(d) development: many Christians today, and most secular economic views, hold that reasonable, transparent interest that reflects genuine risk (e.g. a regulated mortgage) is different from an extortionate or predatory loan, so the real moral issue is the fairness of the rate and the lender's conduct, not interest as a concept, oe B1

(d) reference to a specific example or teaching made accurately, oe B1

(d) Answer: Contrast: Islamic teaching that all interest (riba) is wrong vs the view, held by many Christians and secular economists, that only unfair or extortionate interest is wrong.

(e) L4 A well-argued, balanced answer that considers more than one point of view in a developed way, using accurate and detailed references to religious teaching to support each point, and reaches a clear, justified conclusion. 10-12

(e) L3 A clear and reasoned answer that considers more than one point of view, supported by relevant references to religious teaching, though the justification of the conclusion may be less developed. 7-9

(e) L2 A reasoned answer that considers at least one point of view, with some relevant supporting evidence, but with limited or no consideration of an alternative view. 4-6

(e) L1 One or more relevant points are made, but with little or no supporting evidence and no reasoned conclusion. 1-3

(e) L0 No relevant content. 0

© Revision Library | revisionlibrary.co.uk

(e) Indicative content:

- Agree: Islamic teaching treats all interest (riba) as inherently unjust, since it guarantees the lender a profit without sharing any of the risk of the venture the money is used for; Qur'an 2:275 records that 'Allah has permitted trade and has forbidden interest'.
- Agree: in practice, interest-based debt can trap the poorest borrowers in a cycle they struggle to escape, since interest keeps accumulating even when their circumstances have not improved.
- Agree: Qur'an 3:130 specifically warns against interest that is 'doubled and multiplied', suggesting that even where interest starts small, it has a tendency to compound and worsen a borrower's situation over time.
- Disagree: many economists, and many Christians today, argue interest is a legitimate cost of lending, covering risk and inflation, and it enables people and businesses to access capital (e.g. a mortgage funding a family home) they could not otherwise raise.
- Disagree: UK financial regulation caps the interest and total cost that lenders can charge on high-cost short-term loans, showing a widely accepted view that interest can be made fair through regulation rather than needing to be banned outright.
- Disagree: the moral problem, on this view, is specifically excessive or deceptive lending (e.g. hidden charges, lending irresponsibly to those who cannot repay), not interest as a concept, so a low, transparent, regulated rate is different in kind from an extortionate one.
- A balanced answer might note that Islamic finance offers an alternative model (profit-and-loss sharing rather than fixed interest) precisely to remove this dilemma, showing the debate has produced practical as well as theoretical responses.
- A balanced conclusion might argue that whether interest 'is always' exploitation depends on how the term is defined; reasonable, regulated interest and predatory, extortionate lending are treated very differently even within traditions that permit interest in principle.

© Revision Library | revisionlibrary.co.uk